IGG Has Set Up a Fund to Provide Support in Light of the Wuhan Epidemic The First Batch of Donations Are on the Way

(26 January 2020 – Hong Kong) IGG, a globally renowned mobile game developer and publisher, has set up a US$500,000 donation fund to provide support in light of the recent Wuhan epidemic.

After contacting Wuhan's official health departments and local hospitals, IGG gained an understanding of local medical needs. Making full use of its established global teams, IGG immediately sent out requests to more than a dozen global offices to coordinate the procurement of medical supplies.

As of press time, the first batch of more than 450,000 medical supplies (containing N95 masks, surgical masks, surgical gloves, etc.) has been collected.

These materials are on their way to the front line, and will be received by medical institutions and staff located in the relevant cities in China.
